

BOXERS WOULD TAKE A HIT BY BELIEF BOIT

Have Opportunity to Help Country and Become Fistic Idols.

GRAB FOR PURSE OVERSHOOT'S MARK

NEW YORK, May 4.—A fight expert here says that, instead of considering their own pockets, Jess Willard and Fred Fulton would make a tremendous hit with Americans by agreeing to fight for the world's championship, with the entire profits to be devoted to athletic activities in the army and navy. Under those circumstances, the fight probably could be held at one of the army camps or even in Madison Square garden. Willard has plenty of money and Fulton is not a pauper. If they should announce their willingness to battle for the benefit of our soldiers and sailors, who need financial aid for promoting physical training, perhaps the government would be inclined to settle the question of supremacy without interference by the authorities.

Governor Whitman might consent to a contest in Madison Square Garden if he could be assured that Willard and Fulton wanted nothing more than their legitimate expenses. Should it be made possible for them to come together in the garden, even for a few rounds, with no decision, it is estimated that the public would pay at least $150,000 to see the bout.

Willard and Fulton, with all the other prominent boxers, should be glad to help in this way. A number of leading glove fisters already are teaching our soldiers how to use their hands. But so far Willard and Fulton have done little or nothing.

Too Covetous. As a result of their eagerness to box in Wisconsin for personal gain, there is intense opposition in that state. Willard declared some days ago that the fight was off, as far as he was concerned, although the promoter of the mill believed that it could be decided. The champion and his challenger still have an opportunity to offer their services gratis to aid of the promotion of sports in the army and navy, even if Uncle Sam should decide to turn them down.

EDDIE COLLINS is in prime condition this spring, and it looks as though he will have another one of his big years.

Tim Hendry, who was traded to the Browns by the Yankees for Leo Magee, has been laid up with an attack of pneumonia, and may be out of the game for some time.

One of the busiest baseball men in the game is the manager of the Rochester team. He is managing the club besides looking after the business end of the season. He is also in his spare moments nobody knows.

There have been all sorts of predictions as to the effect of the war upon the attendance at baseball games. Judging by the attendance of some of the contests being played at the present time, you wouldn't think there was a cloud on the international horizon.

BIENSAHAN AT TOMORROW. Roger Bressanhan, star of the Toledo club, and who ranked as one of the greatest catchers in the big leagues, will be 41 years old tomorrow. The former Cardinals chief, who later played with the Cubs, is a native of Ireland, but came to America at an early age. His first big league experience was with Washington, when that city was in the National circuit, and he was then playing as a pitcher. He did everything but control, and his wildness soon brought about his dismissal. In 1911, when John McGraw was managing the Baltimore Orioles, Bressanhan was given another chance to make good. He played both in field and outfield, but most of his work was behind the bat.

The next year he played third and outfield, going with McGraw to New York during the middle of the season. It was not until 1915 that McGraw decided that Bressanhan's specialty was as a backstop, and he speedily demonstrated the correctness of the theory. In 1917, Roger came mighty near ending his career, losing to a pneumonia, but by Andy Cowley, of the Reds. For days Roger was unconscious in a Cincinnati hospital, and the doctors held out scant hope for his recovery. His strong constitution pulled him through. Roger suffered no ill effects from that experience, and the following year saw him in his prime. In 1919 Roger was offered a job as manager of the St. Louis team, provided McGraw was willing. While he
